Frank started his law enforcement career as a Military Policeman in 1982. His years of military service experience include assignments as an MP, light infantryman and combat engineer. With fifteen years in civilian law enforcement (CLE) Frank has performed police duties spanning patrol, investigations, special assignments and training. Having served as his agency's senior training officer for seven years, he continues to serve numerous municipalities as their primary Firearms and Use of Force instructor. A police instructor since 1989, he has been a guest instructor at various academies and/or training facilities. Frank has trained military, law enforcement and security personnel at the federal, state and local levels on various operational tactics. Currently he is working with the United States Army as well as numerous National Guard and CLE units on an initiative to integrate, where practical, military and law enforcement training, particularly where the operations occur in urban terrain.

Outside of the "normal" police and military training and experience, Frank is also PADI certified as a Rescue Diver and Maryland State certified as a Firefighter. Frank's background includes five years of volunteer firefighting service, with the majority of those years coinciding with his scuba diving experience.

Frank is a regular contributor to law enforcement periodicals such as LAW & ORDER, Police & Security News, and the ASLET TRAINER.

Frank is a member in good standing of:

- The National Rifle Association
- American Society for Law Enforcement Training
- International Association of Law Enforcement Firearms Instructors
